

BOUNDARIES WITH STUDENTS

- A leader may never be alone with a student.
 - We define “alone” as out of sight of the rest of the group or behind closed doors.
- Do not participate in emotional or vulnerable conversations with students of the opposite gender. This includes praying over students of the opposite gender.
 - If a student of the opposite gender initiates an emotional or vulnerable conversation or expresses the need to talk about something, connect them with a leader of the same gender.
 - “I am so glad you want to talk with somebody. I think _____ would be able to help you with that better than I can, and they would love to talk to you. Let’s go find them!”
- Be mindful of the way physical touch is used with students.
 - The ONLY forms of physical contact that are acceptable are: high fives, fist bumps, and side hugs.

REDIRECTING STUDENTS

- Students may misbehave in a manner that is aggressive, disrespectful, harmful, etc. The cause of this can spur from being away from home, being in an unfamiliar environment, or simply from the energy around camp.
- Despite the cause, we do not condone poor behavior or disrespect of either fellow students or leaders.
- We understand that handling these instances will be based on the circumstances at the moment. You’re entrusted as a leader to use your discretion to de-escalate the students behavior in a loving, yet firm way. Pull them aside, while still in view of others, and have a conversation with the student about their behavior.
- Ask them questions and hear them out, but ultimately correct their behavior and set an expectation of honor throughout camp.
- If a student persists in poor behavior, please follow the Tiers of Communication, and we will work to resolve the problem together.
